

? 1950

ZULU ANTHEM SUNG AT SWISS MEETING

Cape Times Correspondent

CAUX, Switzerland.—More attention is being paid to Africa than ever before at Dr. Buchman's Moral Rearmament Assembly here this year. The anthem of the Bantu people, "Nkosi Sikeleli Africa", was sung for the first time by a chorus of ten nations.

The entire assembly stood in tribute to the African people as the anthem was sung in Zulu.

It was introduced by Mr. John Ngcobo, a Zulu concert singer, who told how, to come to Caux, he had rejected an invitation to the East Berlin communist youth rally to be trained as a "Paul Robeson of South Africa".

S.A. LEADER

Mr. Bremer Hofmeyr, South African Moral Rearmament leader, rose at the end of the anthem and said: "The anthem has moved me more deeply than anything else I know. It is the anthem of the Coloured peoples of Africa and the tremendous longing of the continent to know the voice of God.

"When Black and White can learn to know the voice of God, that is real democracy.

"In Africa to-day we are offered both organized materialism of the East and disorganized materialism of the West."

Farmer Piet Naude, from Ermelo, said: "In my desire to become a top farmer, I decided to keep my thumb on my African workers.

"Moral Rearmament showed me that my real motive was to get the best out of my workers to fill my own pockets and give back as little as possible.

APOLOGY TO WORKERS

"I apologized to some of my African workers whom I had ill-treated. To some of them I had to pay back money.

"Quite a new relationship developed between me and them. I gave them better food; helped them build better houses to give them more comfort. I now have a deep care for my African workers."

Mr. Naude reported that a lot of other South African farmers had started to run their farms on M.R. principles.

He read a letter from an African Nationalist who had hated Afrikaners but was now fighting with them for national unity.