

Members of Sing Out Rhodesia (above) — the band of young Rhodesians following in the footsteps of the Moral Rearmament-inspired Springbok Stampede — put on a special show at Bulawayo's Roslington Hotel yesterday.

A spokesman for the singers, Miss Melanie Kanins, said after the show that members would be travelling down to Willow Park, Essexvale, to attend a "mini-conference".

"We will discuss what our aims should be and also hear from one or two members of the Springbok Stampede," she said.

The last public performance by Sing Out Rhodesia in Bulawayo was on December 19 when 50 of its members entertained at the Centenary Park Amphitheatre.