Voice of The Hurricane

THE FILM "Voice of the Hurricane" recently shown in Johannesburg while portraying the brutalities of the Congo, is a film of hope and promise of the future.

It holds the key to long-locked human hearts and offers a secret that can weave from the horror of today the fabric of a new and radiant tomorrow.

The danger to our country, reports the MRA information service, is that the Congo horror may widen the gap between the races of South Africa. That is part of the Communist strategy through this terror.

The Rand Daily Mail says of the film it "brings the perils of Africa burningly home to one's own doorstep. Nor has any film yet made so powerfully shown the step from fear to faith and from horror to hope."
