

A STRIKING moment in the show "Springbok Stampede" which is now touring Natal, with the teenage cast jubilantly singing of the sunrise. There are 45 young people on tour, aged from 15 to 27, presenting a programme of lively entertainment for the whole family.

The show will be seen at the Pietermaritzburg City Hall tonight and at the Lyric Theatre, Durban, from May 19 to 24.

Twenty of the participants are still at school, but their studies are continued by correspondence, assisted by five teachers travelling with "Springbok Stampede."

The show started with the idea of assisting teenagers to realise that the future is theirs, and that it is at this stage in their lives that the direction of their lives is established. From that idea the show was born.

The programme ranges from popular items to lively musical numbers composed by the young people themselves. The show is full of movement and action, with an emphasis on zest and happiness.
