SPRINGBOK STORMLOOP*Director states the movement's aims and beliefsTo the Editor, The Argus*

SIR, — As The Argus has quoted an article on the Moral Rearmament Movement and Springbok Stormloop from another paper (August 1), we would like to state clearly what we stand for.

Here are our beliefs and aims as stated in our brochure:

We believe that, as part of Africa, our country must share the responsibility for the development of this continent.

We believe in the dignity and talents of every tribe and race in Africa, and that together we can end violence, dictatorship and Communism.

We believe that God must be restored to leadership as the directing force in the lives of men and nations.

Youth leadership

OUR aims are to give youth a purpose and to create incorruptible leadership for the future;

To create united homes.

To offer industry a common purpose for labour and management.

To break down barriers of distrust, hate and prejudice, and to establish sound contact between South Africa and the rest of the continent.

To take South Africa the next step forward — the spiritual and material development of our continent.

Independent

AS we have worked with Springbok Stormloop we have sought to apply to our lives Christ's standards of absolute honesty, purity, unselfishness and love.

We have found the courage to face the things that were wrong in our lives and the strength to combat them.

We do not believe that man can change himself, and we give Him the credit for whatever good has come into our lives.

Springbok Stormloop is completely independent of any other group in other countries. We determine our own course.

At the same time we would like to make common cause with our generation around the world wherever they stand for honesty, decency and sanity.

We are not content to leave the international field to the Leftists to exploit for their divisive aims.

We want youth around the world to grab the mike from the Leftists and beatniks and sound a clear call for love of home, homeland and humanity.

It is no doubt for this reason that Radio Moscow and the Communist Press from time to time let off a great blast against Moral Rearmament.
