

The sextette from "Springbok Stampede" when they appeared before the Television cameras in Salisbury Rhodesia this year.

SPRINGBOK STAMPEDE

TAKE a cast of eighty young people, all brimful of vital talent and exuberance, add a ten-piece beat band, plus six tons of sound and lighting equipment, and the result? — A musical "happening" unequalled in the history of South African theatre.

For those who have not already guessed, the "happening" in question is Springbok Stampede. The show was last staged in Springs over a year ago, and this Saturday night (tomorrow) it will return again to thrill youngsters and parents alike.

Springbok Stampede is a youth movement directly related to International Moral Rearmament. The ideas and ideals of the movement are projected through the medium of music on stages throughout South Africa and Rhodesia.

MANY FOLLOWERS

Although Springbok Stampede was only recently formed, it has already gained many thousands of followers who have found in its doctrine a way to a better and brighter future for themselves as well as the nation as a whole.

Up until now, unfortunately, booking for Springbok Stampede, which will be staged at the H. F. Verwoerd Theatre at 8 p.m. tomorrow night, has been slow, but it is expected to buck up at the last moment.

Tickets can be obtained from Springs Outfitters, or from members of the cast, who will be in town tomorrow morning.
